“Howard Van Doren Shaw, who lived a half-mile south of the Kelleys’ property on Green Bay Rd. . . was chosen as the architect for “Stonebridge’s” manor house... In many ways, Kelley’s house was the most radically eclectic of Shaw’s houses. In this house, Shaw combined elements such as the arched entryway, suggestive of Italian Villas, with English Tudor and French Gothic stone details. In its planning, Shaw’s design cleverly balances picturesque asymmetries to produce an overall formality on the exterior.”
